

Hello preschool families!

This week in outdoor environment we continued to paint the large flower pot that will eventually hold our Peace Pole. All of the students had a chance to paint with green, gold, and blue while we enjoyed the surprisingly nice September weather!

I also took a few more steps in getting our outdoor environment ready for consistent work and play. The gardens are being cleared, and the tables, stumps, and stones are being arranged to make a welcoming and beautiful environment.

While clearing the garden, the students also had the opportunity to smell the mint, oregano, and sage which dried in the garden over the summer. It was a fun experience!

Have time to help us plant next week? Want to donate some supplies instead? See our sign up genius here:

Next week we will spend more time in the garden as we have our first planting day of the season. We will also be painting rocks to decorate our gardens.

I am looking forward to the cool weather that October is sure to bless us with so that we can spend more time together outside!
