

Distance Learning Plan for Charter Schools

As of 2020, however, many school districts have been forced to transition their students to distance learning (DL) regarding the suspension of in-person school due to COVID-19. As part of the transition order, all public chartering school's distance learning plan should be revised for ability to offer distance learning options for students in their respective school districts for use as a contingency plan for the 2020-2021 school year. Charter schools are required to submit a plan to their respective state board of education (SBE) prior to implementing distance learning. Therefore, each school is required to have a DL plan submitted to the state by 2020.

Implementing distance learning is a process that takes time and effort, but many charter schools struggle to do so. This document provides an overview of the distance learning plan and the required components for a charter school to have a plan in place by the 2020-2021 school year.

Overview

Charter schools are public schools that operate under a charter from the state board of education (SBE) using the template provided by the state board. Not all charter schools have the same template, but all are required to have a plan in place. The template is a document that outlines the school's plan for distance learning and provides a framework for the school to follow. The plan should include the school's vision for distance learning, the school's goals for distance learning, and the school's plan for implementing distance learning.

A charter school plan, page 1-1, is a charter school's plan for distance learning and should include the school's vision for distance learning, the school's goals for distance learning, and the school's plan for implementing distance learning.

A vision of the DL will be a comprehensive learning plan that includes the school's vision for distance learning, the school's goals for distance learning, and the school's plan for implementing distance learning.
